The common theme on both photos is bungee jumping. In the first photo, somebody has already jumped from a bridge and is swinging in the air, dislike the second photo where a woman is in the middle of putting on her safety equipment before her jump. It seems to me as she's having some kind of argument with the man who is with her because her arms are raised in the air and she looks angry. She doesn't seem to really fancy to do the jump and I'll say that the man is getting impatient because he has to wait. In the second photo, everyone seems to be having a good time, rather to arguing. The way I watch it, bungee jumping is not a sport for everyone and people ought to considering the risks before trying it or encouraging others to do it. If somebody isn't keen with jumping from a very high point, then I think a best option would be to try abseiling first.

How to achieve success at the Marathon des Sables

The best – and probably only – way of completing this six-day ultramarathon in southern Morocco is to make efficient preparations. Here are some tips to help you survive the 251 km course.

1 __

As a competitor in the Marathon des Sables, you'll be responsible for your own food. To maintain physical strength, you'll need between 3,000 and 4,000 calories per day. Dried food is best because of its low weight and volume. Plan for a solid breakfast before the race, and a large evening meal afterwards. Take dried fruit and nuts, and high energy bars as snacks.

2 __

During the race, you'll need to drink between six and seven litres of water per day. Water is distributed in the morning, at control posts during the race and on completion of each stage – remember to save some each evening to prepare breakfast the next day. You mustn't discard water bottles in the desert; they should be exchanged for new ones or thrown away at the control posts.

3 __

You'll need a comfortable rucksack that doesn't cover the competitor number on your chest; if it does, you may not be allowed to compete. The bag should contain everything you need, including food, a stove for heating water, a sleeping bag and your clothes. Everything you carry must be weighed so that your rucksack isn't too heavy for you.

4 __

You should start preparing at least six months before the event starts. Aim to run 150 to 190 miles a week, increasing the distance as time goes on. Train with a rucksack occasionally and get used to drinking water on long runs. You can also use the practice runs to test different energy foods. If you aren't used to running, you should not enter the competition.

5 __

Special satellite facilities are arranged during the race so that you can call friends and family. Phone calls cost around €3 per minute, so bring cash or a credit card with you. You can send one free email per day and the rest you will be charged for. If you want to receive internet messages, the sender will need your full name and competitor number.

- A What are the sleeping arrangements?
- B What are the rules about equipment?
- C How much should I drink every day?
- D Will I be able to contact home during the event?
- E How should I go about training for the race?
- F Do I need to take anything to eat?
